One of the best Indian-story writer!!Von Ein KundeWinter Fawn is torn between her white father and her dead mother's Arapaho tribe. When she comes to the aid of Carson, injured in a raid, she is forced to choose abruptly. The half-breed woman and the ex-conferate soldier turned cattle-rancher try to find their place and peace in a world full of danger and discrimination. J. Hudson is one of the few authors of Indian romances (together with C. Anderson) who know how to stay on the right side of romance and adventure without falling into a ridiculously simple and sickingly sweet love-story of red and white.
